Jurist Learns That Man Accepted From Venire by Defense Is Under Summons to Testify for Accused.

Schreihagen's name is on the venire for ervice in Judge Moore's court, but the latter announced that he would not permit Schreighagen to qualify as a juror as long as he remained on the bench

Before rebuking Attorney Stafford, Judge Moore excluded the jury. He declared that Stafford, as an officer of the court, was obligated to inform the Judge of Schreihagen's interest in the case, and said that professional ethics required Mr. Stafford to deal fairly with the court.

When examined by Prosecuting Attorney Williams yesterday afternoon, Schreihagen declared that he had no interest in the case and that he could render a fair and impartial verdict on the evidence. Attorney Stafford, it is said, raised no bjection to Schreihagen's presence on the jury, but on a challenge by Prosecuting Attorney Williams, he was rejected. Last night Schreihagen was brought by the defense to testify to Ross's good character. Judge Moore asked the witness when he had been subpoensed, and was informed that the subpoena had been served on him Monday. Without permitting Schreihagen to continue his testimony, Judge Moore adminis-tered a reprimand in the presence of the ury, other witnesses, officers of the court and many spectators. The case was that of William Ross, who was arrested by Detective James Cullen, charged with insulting women, and came to Judge Moore's court from the Third Dis trict Police Court on appeal.

Mr. Haas has been the pastor of St. James's Church since August 2, 1886. When he took charge of it there were scarcely more than fourteen families in the congregation, which now numbers 130 families. During his pastorate the present church building, the parochial residence and the school hall, the value of all being more than $6,000, have been erected.

The congregation is one of the largest of the denomination in St. Louis, and the church has attracted many persons not allied with the denomination, as the English service on Sunday evenings is a regular part of the church programme.

The call from the Buffalo church came to Mr. Haas as a surprise, he never having preached to its congregation. After the receipt of the call he visited Buffalo and accepted the pastorate upon the condition of his being released by his St. Louis congregation.

At a congregational meeting the resignation was accepted, and at a subsequent meeting the new pastor was elected.

MEMORANDUM.

Benjamın Franklin, American philosopher and statesmen, gave utterance to many maxims -one of which was:

"Fair Trading Makes Fast Friends."

You appreciate the force of this truism instantly, because you have experienced the peace of mind which follows business transactions with men in whom you have confidence.

You have undoubtedly heard that the success of the Union Electric Light & Power Company is due to its "fair trading," and that it has many friends among the Financial and Mercantile Establishments of this city. Its cardinal precepts have been: "Courteous attention, fair trading and efficient service." Every effort is made to please its patrons, on whom it is, of course, dependent for its success.

Electricity for illuminating and power purposes gives the very best satisfaction, and inquiries will receive prompt attention and be thoroughly appreciated.

hopelessness of financial legislation in time to do any material good, members of the Cabinet and important Senators have already advised the President not to make in his forthcoming message any recomgendation for financial legislation as a remedy for present or future ills. Platt of New York and possibly Senator Hanna of Ohio are unalterably opposed to any extra session, and, if the President should seek the advice of these men, he will be strongly urged against calling it.

Senator Quay, who was in town to-day on his way to Florids, sounded the keynote of the opposition when he said that it was "the worst kind of politics."

Unless there is some possibility of finally agreeing on a financial bill, it is now said here that Senators Allison, Aldrich and Spooner will be likely to oppose an extra session even in November, Senator O. H. Platt, however, who is interested in pushing Cuban reciprocity to a conclusion as quickly as possible, will still be found favorable to a session in early November. But it looks now like another prolonged contest on this question in both branches, and many of the leaders think it inadvisable to call an early session on Cuba's account alone.

Among those opposed to any financial recwill be strongly urged against calling it.

ble to call an early session on Cuba's account alone.

Among those opposed to any financial recommendations in the coming message, in view of the present situation, is Secretary Shaw himself, who does not think it wise to call prominently to public attention that there is necessity in the business situation for any emergency legislation.

It is thought altogether improbable that the party leaders will be able to induce the President to refrain from his November session programme. The leaders, however, will bring forward the argument that while two reasons were sufficient to call an extra session—finance and Cuba—now that one of them has disappeared, it would be unsafe to persist.
